1. What is redistricting?

Every ten years, the census count gives us a snapshot of how many people there are in the United States and where they live.

Once we know how many people live in California, we redistrict. That is, we draw new district lines that put the same number of people into each electoral district.

Redistricting ensures every person has equal representation by drawing districts with an equal number of people – one person, one vote.

Why is redistricting important to me?

One of the greatest powers that you have is the right to elect your own representatives to conduct the business of your government. How the district boundaries are drawn can make the difference between empowering and maximizing the voters' voices or minimizing and muting those voices. The independent Citizens Redistricting Commission is committed to drawing fair districts that reflect the best interests of the people, not the incumbent political parties.

Speaking up about your community is critical to ensuring district lines are drawn to keep your community whole and grouped with nearby communities with similar interests. This ensures that your voice is heard by your elected leaders in such decisions as to the quality of your child's school or how high your taxes are.

2. What is the California Citizens Redistricting Commission?

In 2008 and 2010, the voters passed Propositions 11 and 20. In 2011, for the first time in California, a 14-person commission called the Citizens Redistricting Commission will draw district maps for:

- 53 congressional districts
- 40 State Senate districts
- 80 State Assembly districts
- 4 Board of Equalization Districts

The Citizens Redistricting Commission (“the Commission”) met for the first time in January 2011. During the spring and summer, the Commission will hold meetings around California to listen to residents describe their communities, neighborhoods, and what issues are important to them. Based on this public input, the commission will draw new district maps. The Commission has until August 15, 2011 to approve final district lines.

For more information about what the Citizens Redistricting Commission is doing, visit the official site:

www.wedrawthelines.ca.gov

3. How will the Commission decide where to draw district lines?

The California Constitution tells the Commission what to consider when deciding where to draw district lines. These redistricting criteria were included in Prop 11 and 20, and were approved by California voters. When deciding where to draw the lines, the Commissioners must consider these criteria and only these criteria.

In addition, the Commission must consider the criteria in rank order, meaning that in the case of a conflict between criteria, it must choose to comply with the higher priority criterion. The redistricting criteria for the Commission are:

- 1) Comply with the US Constitution and equal population requirements.
 - For US Congressional Districts, this means districts that are as equal as practicable
 - For Assembly, Senate, and Board of Equalization Districts, this means districts that are reasonably equal, except when necessary to comply with the Voting Rights Act.
- 2) Comply with the federal Voting Rights Act.
- 3) Draw districts that are contiguous. This means that a district should be connected at all points.
- 4) Respect counties, cities, communities of interest, and neighborhoods, where possible.
- 5) Draw districts to be compact, where practicable. This rule should only be applied after the other earlier criteria have been satisfied.
- 6) Draw districts to nest within each other, where possible after complying with the preceding criteria. That means:
 - 1 Senate district contains 2 Assembly districts
 - 1 Board of Equalization district contains 10 Senate districts
- 7) The Commission may not consider an incumbent or political candidate's residence in creating a district. The Commission shall not draw districts for the purpose of favoring or discriminating against an incumbent, political candidate or political party.

4. What is the Voting Rights Act and why is it important?

The Voting Rights Act is a federal law that prohibits discrimination in voting. It prohibits voting practices or procedures that discriminate on the basis of race, color, or protected language minority status. Language minority groups protected by the Voting Rights Act are Asian, Alaska Native, Native American, and Spanish heritage groups. The Voting Rights Act also prohibits discriminatory districting plans, including districts that provide racial or protected language minority voters with less opportunity to elect representatives of their choice than other voters.

The California redistricting criteria establish that complying with the Voting Rights Act is an important goal for the Commission's work. Two provisions of the VRA are directly involved in redistricting in California:

Section 2: prohibits discrimination on the basis of race or protected language minority status in voting by any jurisdiction in the nation that conducts elections. This includes redistricting plans that "dilute" the voting strength of protected groups by not providing them with an opportunity to elect representatives of their choice.

Section 5: requires certain "covered" jurisdictions to obtain permission (called "preclearance") from the federal government before using any new voting policy or practice. In California, four counties are "covered jurisdictions": King, Merced, Monterey, and Yuba Counties. California's new districts that contain any portion of a covered county must be pre-cleared before it can be used. These counties were identified as areas with historically low levels of voter registration or participation in 1964, 1968 or 1972.

For a more detailed description of how the Voting Rights Act works, visit the U.S. Department of Justice at: <http://www.justice.gov/crt/about/vot/redistricting.php>.

5. What is a Community of Interest?

The California Constitution defines a community of interest as:

A community of interest is a contiguous population which shares common social and economic interests that should be included within a single district for purposes of its effective and fair representation. Examples of such shared interests are those common to an urban area, a rural area, an industrial area, or an agricultural area, and those common to areas in which the people share similar living standards, use the same transportation facilities, have similar work opportunities, or have access to the same media of communication relevant to the election process. Communities of interest shall not include relationships with political parties, incumbents, or political candidates.

-Section 2(d)(4) of Article XXI of the California Constitution

This basically means that a community of interest is a group of people in the same area that share social and economic interests and who should be kept together in a district so they can get fair and effective representation.

Note, however, that although the law defines community of interest broadly it may NOT be based on a relationship with a political party, incumbent elected official, or candidate.

This is where the Commission most needs to hear from the public. Although Commissioners are from a variety of locations across California, they don't know about all the communities of interest in the state. They need to hear from you where your community is located and why it is important to keep it together. Without that information from you, the Commission won't know which communities to avoid splitting when drawing lines.

How do I talk about my community?

The Commission needs to know three key things from you about your community:

1. The economic and social interests that bind your community together.
2. Why your community should be kept together for fair and effective representation.
3. Where your community is located

*Common social and economic interests:

Common social and economic interests can vary a lot from community to community, so it is up to you to tell the Commission what they are. They could include common culture or history, common use of a particular park or transportation, or a common goal or aspiration, such as reducing crime or bringing in more jobs and development.

*Why your community should be kept together:

You should describe why your community should be kept together in a district, which can also include why it would be harmful for your community to be split up into different districts. For example, if your community has been organizing to improve public safety or to improve public parks, you might highlight how your efforts would be helped by being represented by one representative rather than having to work with two (or more) representatives if your community is split.

*Where your community is located:

In order for the Commission to be able to take your community into account, you MUST tell it where your community is located. You should tell the Commission where it is located (county and/or city) and also describe its borders. You can do this by describing physical barriers like streets, rivers, military bases, or shopping malls, and also by describing legal barriers like city or county lines.

In addition, it is very helpful to provide the Commission with a map of where your community is located, including any landmarks or locations that are particularly important to your community.

Some online software, such as Google Maps, provide a free and user-friendly method to produce such maps that you can email directly to the Commission or post online for others to comment. Information about using Google Maps to map your community of interest is available at: www.Maps. Google.com.

More sophisticated software is available which not only shows you geography, but also Census information about the people that live there. This software is not free, but is available to the public at the Redistricting Assistance Sites provided by the Redistricting Group at Berkeley Law.

When thinking about your testimony to the Commission, it might be helpful to imagine how you would describe your community to a visitor from out of town. You might talk about the kind of people who live in your community, important issues, community centers, and your community's history.

EXAMPLE

I live in a unique area of Farmers Branch called Oak Knoll Valley. It is also a certified neighborhood council. The neighborhood is bounded between Highway 9 on the west and Sunnyside River on the east side. There are approximately 8,000 residents in Oak Knoll Valley and it is primarily a residential area with some areas zoned for commercial and mixed use especially along the river.

The languages spoken in Oak Knoll Valley are primarily English and Spanish with some residents speaking Vietnamese and Mandarin. While most residents go outside our community for shopping and employment, they tend to stay here for their socializing, religious activities and recreation. The Oak Knoll Regional Center provides a variety of activities and is a real hub of the community.

Across the river from Oak Knoll Valley is the community of River Glen which is similar to our community as it is primarily residential. We are in the same school district and the high school which Oak Knoll students attend is in River Glen. It would make sense that we would be included in the same legislative or Congressional district.

On the other side of Highway 9 is Gold City which is primarily an industrial and commercial area. Most of the residents live in multi-family apartment buildings and many of them are new to the area. Gold City is part of a different school district than Oak Knoll. While Gold City is in close proximity to Oak Knoll we have less in common than we do with River Glen.

6. How can I get involved?

There are three main ways that you can provide the Commission with testimony:

- In Person at a Public Hearing: In the Spring and Summer, the Commission will hold several hearings all over the state where you can provide testimony in person. More information about the Public Input hearing is in Section 7 of this document. You can also find out more on the Commission's website <http://www.wedrawthelines.ca.gov/hearings.html>
- In writing: You can also provide testimony to the Commission in writing at public hearings, or you can send it directly to the Commission. You can send information to the Commission by e-mail, mail and fax:

votersfirstact@crc.ca.gov.

Citizens Redistricting Commission
1130 K Street, Suite 101
Sacramento, CA 95814
Fax: (916) 322-0904

- Community Based Organizations (CBOs): Many CBOs are gathering public testimony to give to the Commission. Let your local CBO know if you want to participate.

7. Where to Get Help On Preparing Your Testimony to the Commission

The Redistricting Group at Berkeley Law has opened six Redistricting Assistance Sites across the state where you can get help with drawing maps of your community or accessing data about your community. At the Redistricting Assistance Sites, you can even use a computer with special redistricting software for free. Below are the location, hours, and contact information for the six centers:

- Berkeley: UC Berkeley Law, 2850 Telegraph Ave, Suite 471, Berkeley, CA 94705-7220
Manager: Ms. Tamina Alon, talon@law.berkeley.edu
Hours: Wed 3-9pm, Thur 3-9pm, Sat 9am-4pm and by appointment
- Sacramento: Central Library, 2nd Fl. Conference Rm., 828 I St., Sacramento, CA 95814
Manager: Ms. Robin Evans, raevans@law.berkeley.edu
Hours: Wed 2-8pm, Thur 2-8pm, Sat 10am-5pm and by appointment
- Fresno: 1713 Tulare St, Suite 130, Fresno, CA 93721
Manager: Mr. Troy Mattson, tmattson@law.berkeley.edu
Hours: Wed 3-9pm, Thur 3-9pm, Sat 9am-4pm and by appointment
- Los Angeles: 3167 #F, South Hoover St, Los Angeles, CA 90007
Manager: Mr. Richard Yarnes, rdyarnes@law.berkeley.edu
Hours: Wed 3-9pm, Thur 3-9pm, Sat 9am-4pm and by appointment
- San Bernardino: 475A S. Arrowhead Ave, San Bernardino, CA, 92408

In addition, The Advancement Project is developing free online software that you would be able to use to learn more about and map your community: www.ReDrawCA.org. (available April 15th)

For a list of resources provided by various groups, visit www.RedistrictingCA.org.

8. Public Hearing Schedule

During the Spring and Summer, the Commission will hold several public hearings around the state to receive public input. For the full updated schedule of hearing dates and locations, as well as to see any proposed maps of districts, please visit www.wedrawthelines.ca.gov/hearings.html

April–May 2011: Pre-map Input Hearings

Before the Commission draws draft maps, it will hold hearings around the state to receive input from the public. At a hearing, you can talk to the Commissioners about topics such as your community of interest, neighborhood, city, county, or what areas you would like to see your districts include.

June 10, 2011: Proposed date for the Commission to post the first draft maps*

Taking the public's input into account, the Commission will draft and then publicly post its first draft maps for Congressional, State Board of Equalization, State Senate, and State Assembly districts.

June 2011: Draft Map Input Hearings

After the Commission has posted its first draft district maps, it will hold hearings around the state to hear from the public. You can talk to the Commission about the draft districts, such as how the new districts might impact your community.

July 1, 2011: Proposed date for the Commission to post the second draft maps. *

Taking public input into account, the Commission may revise the districts and will provide a second set of draft district maps to the public.

July 2011: Second Draft Map Input Hearings

After posting the second draft maps, the Commission will again hold several hearings to get additional input from the public. The locations of these hearings will be determined based on need.

July 26, 2011: Proposed date for the Commission to post the final maps*

August 15, 2011: Deadline for the Commission to approve the final maps

In order to approve and adopt the district maps for Congress, State Board of Equalization, State Senate, and State Assembly, the Commission must vote to approve them. In order to do so, the maps must have the affirmative votes of at least 3 of 5 its Democrat Commissioners, at least 3 of 5 its Republican Commissioners, and at least 3 of 4 of its Decline-To-State Commissioners.

These are proposed dates and may change. Please check www.wedrawthelines.ca.gov for the most up-to-date schedules, meeting locations, agendas, and other information.*

9. Frequently Asked Questions

Q. How many Commission members are there?

A. The Commission has 14 members from diverse ethnic, geographic, gender, and economic backgrounds. Under the law, the Commission must include five Democrat, five Republican, and four from neither of the two major political parties.

Q. What was the process of becoming a member of the Commission?

A. When the applications became available, 30,000 interested parties submitted their applications online. Applicants who affirmed in their applications that they met all of the law's qualifications for serving on the Commission and did not have a "conflict of interest" were invited to submit a supplemental application in which they answered essay questions providing insight into their professional experience, awareness of California's diversity, and their reasons for wanting to serve on the Commission.

Q. How were the members of the Commission selected after the application period closed?

Three auditors from the Bureau of State Audits reviewed the applications of all applicants who did not have a conflict of interest and who submitted the supplemental application. The auditors then selected 120 of the most qualified applicants to be interviewed in Sacramento. The 120 applicants were divided into 3 sub-pools: 40 Democrats, 40 Republicans, and 40 who were not affiliated with either of the two major political parties.

Following the interviews, the total pool was reduced to 60, again with equal sub-pools. Those 60 names were sent to the leadership of both houses of the Legislature, where the leaders exercised their right under the Act to remove up to 24 applicants from the pool.

On November 18, 2010, the State Auditor randomly drew the names of 3 Democrats, 3 Republicans and 2 Decline to State applicants, and they became the first 8 members of the Commission. Subsequently, on December 15, 2010, the first 8 Commissioners selected the final 6 Commissioners, choosing 2 Democrats, 2 Republicans and 2 Decline to State.

Q. Will Commission members be paid?

Yes, the law specifies that members of the Commission will be compensated at the rate of $300 for each day a Commissioner is engaged in Commission business. It also allows for reimbursement for personal expenses incurred in connection with the duties required of Commissioners.

Q How long will Commission members serve?

The law states that the Commission will serve for 10 years. However, most of the work that the Commissioners will perform should be completed by the time they approve the maps of the new districts, which is required by August 15, 2011.

Q. What is the difference between reapportionment and redistricting?

A. Reapportionment is the Constitutionally-required process by which seats in the US House of Representatives are redistributed among the 50 states after each decennial Census. Redistricting is the process of drawing district lines to equalize populations which means changing the boundaries every ten years.

Q. Why should Californians have confidence that 14 Commissioners who are unelected and therefore unaccountable to the voters will be able to produce district boundaries that are in the voters' best interests?

A. It was the voters themselves that took the job of redistricting out of the elected legislators' hands. The voters instituted a new process to choose 14 citizens with a myriad of backgrounds, skills and from varied geographic locations to draw district boundaries based on criteria designed to preserve communities of interest.

Q. Won't legislators be working behind the scenes to influence Commissioners and take control of the redistricting process?

A. The law is very clear that no non-public communication between legislators and Commissioners regarding redistricting issues can occur. Any comment from legislators must take place in a public Commission meeting--just like any other citizen.

Q. Does the law require that districts be more competitive, rather than dominated by one political party?

A: No. District competitiveness is not on the list of criteria that the Commission must consider when drawing districts.

Q. Can't this whole process be done by a computer program?

A: The Commission is relying on the active participation of citizens across California to weigh in on how the districts should be drawn, since information about "communities of interest" is not collected in the Census. This is an open conversation that will assist the Commission in evaluating citizen input and exercising responsible judgment about what districts should look like – a computer could never do that

Q: What is the difference between the Commission's work and what was done in the past?

A: Historically, the California legislature drew the district boundaries, including for their own districts. This Commission is independent of the legislature and committed to including the voices of all Californians in the process.

Q. What happens if the Commission cannot agree on the final redistricting maps?

A. In the unlikely scenario that the Commission does not come to agreement on final district boundaries, the matter goes directly to the California Supreme Court which will appoint three masters to draw the lines.

Q. What happens if there is a legal challenge to the district maps adopted by the Commission?

A. Any legal challenge to the new districts goes directly to the California Supreme Court for review.

10. Who are the Commissioners?

BIOGRAPHIES

Dr. Gabino Aguirre was born to farm worker parents and spent his childhood following the crops cycling from Texas to Oregon, California and then Arizona. After graduating from high school in Arizona, he left his family to come to California.
